HUNDREDS AT FINAL RITES FOR TINLEY BANKER

John Conrad Andres, aged 64 years, former Mayor of Tinley Park and banker died Saturday morning at his home in Tinley Park following a lingering illness.

Mr. Andres was born in Tinley Park, May 29, 1877.

He attended and was graduated from Berea College and for a number of years was employed in the Cook County Treasurer's office in Chicago.

In 1912 the Bremen State Bank was organized and Mr. Andres became the first cashier of this bank, and his father, the late C. Andres, was elected the first president of this institution.

Later he became active in local politics and was elected Mayor of Tinley Park and held this office for several terms.

Mr. Andres was a civic leader and was a man of sterling character. A trust to him was a sacred obligation and was always kept as such. He was a real friend and could always be relied on for safe and conservative advice and counsel.

As a business man he was an example of integrity and justness and fair dealing.

As a friend he was sincere and lived up to everything the word implies.

He was vitally interested in the religious side of life and as a member of the Tinley Park Methodist church, he did much for the church and was especially interested in the building of the new edifice.

August 16, 1899 he was united in marriage with Miss Julia Funk who preceded him in death in July 1938.

Mr. Andres gradually broke down in health and retired from all active work. He was president of the Bremen State Bank at the time of his death.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the late home to the Tinley Park Methodist church at 2 p. m. Rev. L. E. Weinreich officiated.

The floral offerings were exquisite and profuse.

Mr. Andres was a member of the Masonic fraternity and held his membership in the Calumet lodge.

At the conclusion of the funeral sermon, the Masonic funeral rites were performed with Mr. DeVal of Tinley Park in charge. The rites were very impressive. A Masonic male quartet sang a number of selections.

The church auditorium was filled, as also were the church parlors with hundreds of friends, neighbors and relatives who paid their final tributes of respect.

As a special mark of honor and respect to the memory of Mr. Andres, all the business houses of Tinley Park closed during the time of the funeral.

Surviving are two brothers, Christian Andres, Tinley Park, Adam of Overton, Nebraska; two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Harding of Tinley Park, Mrs. August Goebel of Overton, Nebraska and a host of other relatives and friends.

Burial was made in the Methodist cemetery northwest of Tinley Park.

What, Another Fluke?

The following editorial in the Chicago Sunday Tribune tells very plainly why. Says the editorial:

"Now that the aluminum has been gathered it is being admitted that scrap aluminum cannot be used in building airplanes and that the purpose of the drive was to build up civilian morale. This may explain why the navy department is offering at San Diego three lots of aluminum totaling 260,000 pounds for sale to the highest bidder. That happens to be the precise amount contributed by Chicago people during the drive. Can it be they are selling off our old pots and pans?"

This kind of tom foolery is going to make the American people distrustful of future drives and the next time they are asked to cooperate in a drive they will take it for a false alarm and pass it up.

Tinley Rejects Bids

The Village Board of Tinley Park has had the proposition of a 3500 foot water main extension project under consideration for several weeks.

The Board advertised for bids and at the first hearing refused them. Bids were again advertised for and at a special meeting on Tuesday evening of this week all bids were rejected. The project from present indications will be tabled for this summer. About 10 bids were received some of them for the complete job and others only on materials etc.

Home Coming Exhibits Committee Announce New Regulations

The Committee on Exhibits is anxious to make some improvements in displaying the many articles of interest under the "big tent" during the coming fall festival this year. In order to make these improvements it will be necessary to follow two simple rules:

1. All articles for exhibition should be brought to the tent no later than 5 o'clock Friday, August 22.
2. All exhibitors are requested to fill in a card for identification as soon as the exhibits are brought in. The committee will not assume responsibility for articles not registered in this way.

All efforts to conform to these two rules will be greatly appreciated. The exhibits will be classified as follows: 1. garden produce (fresh and canned) blue and red ribbon awards. 2. Flowers, blue and red ribbon awards. 3. Needlework and other handiwork. 4. Antiques and other objects of local historical value.

Men, bring in your prize fruit, vegetables and grain. Ladies, show our visitors the art of home canning and the beauty of your needlework. Surely, every home in Mokena possesses at least one object of interest to the thousands who view our exhibits every year. Search out the relics of Mokena's past history and put them on display. Articles of special value will receive extra protection upon request. Prize winners will be announced over the public speaking system Saturday evening. Help us to make our exhibition bigger and better.

More Soy Bean Storage Needed On Will Co. Farms

More soybean storage will be needed on Will County farms this fall as a result of increased production and reduced warehouse space, according to Byron Gaskill, Chairman Will county AAA. He said that permanent storage on every farm should be sufficient to carry surplus grain from one year over to the next.

Recalling the fall of 1939 when railroad sidings within a 50-mile radius of processing centers were taxed to capacity with soybean shipments, Mr. Gaskill pointed out that it is essential that this does not happen again this year to overburden transportation facilities and thus hamper the movement of defense goods. Less storage is available for soy beans at terminals this year because more space than usual is taken up by wheat, he said.

It was explained that dwindling corn stored on some farms will release space for beans but on many farms new storage structures must be built or old ones repaired.

Priorities have been obtained for a certain amount of steel to be used in farm storage construction, but farmers are advised to use sparingly of materials needed in arms production and build their new bins of lumber. It was pointed out that growers sealing wheat on their farms are eligible for a 7-cent bushel storage advance to enable them to construct new, or repair old, storage facilities. Agricultural conservation payments may be assigned for this expense.

Smaller makes of portable steel bins erected to house government corn are being sold to farmers through the Will county AAA committee to ease the storage situation.

Bremen Farm Receives Floral Award

Ehrich Farm is First Prize Winner in annual Competition.

For the third consecutive year the Farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Ehrich and son Alfred at 177th and Crawford Ave., has been adjudged First Prize Winner in the Illinois farm Floral Contest.

This year's contest was the fourth of its kind. Like earlier ones, it stressed good taste and effective use of available facilities, rather than cash outlay in the effort to make farm homes attractive. General purpose in the competition is to improve the appearance of the farm home, as seen by the spectator.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Ehrich received the cash award including a Bronze plaque, on Wednesday at the Illinois State Fair where the State Highway division unveiled an exhibit showing the garden and lawn improvements of running contestants.

The Floral contest was originated by the late Gov. Horner, but it is now known as the Louis L. Emerson Memorial farm Floral contest. The Ehrich flower garden was chosen as the most beautiful in Cook County. Approximately 1700 property owners with homes bordering State Highways participated in the Contest.

Mrs. Ehrich refers to the garden as her friendship garden because most of the colorful plants and bulbs were given to her by friends.

Iris, phlox, roses, peonies of all colors dominate the garden display with the expanse of a well kept lawn.

New Lenox Gas Station Scene Of Brutal Assault

Union goons have opened hoodlum assaults in Will County on business men who do not bow to their dictates as was evidenced in the case of Fred Twietmeyer, operator of the Homewood Dairy Company, when he was beaten up at New Lenox by a union gang from Joliet because he refused to halt the sale of milk in gallon and half gallon containers. Mr. Twietmeyer suffered a broken nose and severe lacerations upon his head and face.

Last Thursday Burt Adams, one of Mr. Twietmeyers' drivers told him he had been warned by one of Joliet's union business agents to "keep that gallon and half gallon stuff out of Will County or you will lose your truck and disappear". Twietmeyer decided to accompany Adams on his round of stores Friday.

In Lockport Adams pointed to a car following the truck and said one of the passengers was the man who had threatened him. The car drew up across the street from the truck while a delivery was made.

Twietmeyer charges that a Lockport policeman came up and searched him and his driver for guns.

Heading back toward Homewood the goons attempted to force the truck off the road but failed. At New Lenox, Twietmeyer and his driver pulled up at the Cities Service Station at the corner of Cedar road and Lincoln Highway, so that he could telephone police.

Before the call was completed two goons rushed in, jerked the telephone from his hand and beat him up Twietmeyer said. Adams escaped the same fate by breaking free from the men and escaping. As he staggered out of the gas station Twietmeyer asserted a second car drove up and the occupant jumped out and knocked Twietmeyer down again.

Three business agents of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs union of Joliet were blamed for the assault by Twietmeyer in warrants for their arrest. Bail was fixed at $5,000 each. They are Howard and Elrie (Husky) Floyd and Jerry Dodge.

State's Attorney James Burke says he will investigate the possibility that the attack sprang from a conspiracy. He said there is a report that certain dairy companies want to halt retail sale of milk in gallon and half gallon containers.

State's Attorney Burke says he is not going to stand for any union goon terrorism in Will County.

One of the Floyd's formerly resided on a farm east of New Lenox. The Chicago papers are criticising Sheriff James O'Neill and his force for not having arrested the three labor goons.

Raid-Shelters Foil Jap Bombs In War Capital

Chinese Take to the Hills
Around Chungking
For Safety.

By GERALD WILSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
NEW YORK CITY.—Attempts to bomb Chungking out of existence become more hopeless with every bombing, showing that, as a national capital, Chungking can endure indefinitely, according to Mr. Ronald Rees, secretary of the National Christian council, who recently arrived in New York from China. Chungking was the last stop in a six-weeks' trip made by Mr. Rees throughout China in the interest of work and relief projects being financed by American churches through United China Relief.

According to Mr. Rees, residents of Chungking are 16 times safer today from air-raids than they were two years ago, and there had been a drastic decline in air-raid casualties until the recent accident that caused several hundred deaths from suffocation inside an underground shelter.

"This accident does not detract from Chungking's effective air-raid precautions, its alarm system and its shelters, which make Chungking the safest war capital in the world," said Mr. Rees.

"When Japan first struck at Chungking in May, 1939, the city had very little defending air force, and few anti-aircraft guns or air-raid shelters. In May and June of that year, over 4,000 people were killed.

Thousands in Caves.

"During the first breathing spell, 7,000 stone cutters of Chungking got busy with dynamite and crowbars, and blasted hundreds of roomy shelters from the sides of the sandstone hill on which Chungking sits. Today, the steep sides of the hill are honeycombed with underground shelters, and most of Chungking's population can be accommodated inside them. Some of the tunnels house several thousand people."

Here is the picture of China's war-time capital as given by Mr. Rees: When the Chinese government moved in during 1938, Chungking was a quiet, picturesque, almost medieval village, without electric power development, without railroad connections with the rest of China, and with no modern highways. Today, by contrast, Chungking is a beehive of activity, the dynamo that directs all the human and mechanical energy that is developing free China. A large part of the relief work for Free China is directed from the war-time capital. Chungking has become the center of a network of highways fanning out to all parts of China, and the center of air transportation connecting with Europe, and with the Western world via Hongkong.

The Chinese capital's most publicized air link with the Western world is its Hongkong-Chungking service, maintained daily by two companies: the Chinese National Aviation corporation and Eurasia. Both planes leave Hongkong secretly, shortly after midnight, so as to fly undetected over Japanese-held territory. The CNAC line continues beyond Chungking to Kunming and on to Rangoon. Another airline runs from Chungking through Chengtu and Lanchow, on to Russia and Germany. Chungking's airport has been built on a small island in the Yangtze river.

The now famous Burma Road, which connects with two highways leading from the south into Chungking, is only one road link now used to take medical and military supplies into China. Others are the Marco Polo road, running from Chungking northward to the Trans-Siberian railroad at Urdinsk; and the Northwest route from Chungking to Sergiopol on the Trans-Siberian railroad.

Population Increases.

Chungking proper is spread out on a promontory of solid rock between pine hills and valleys, with rivers on two sides: the Yangtze and the Chialing. Since the war has closed the Yangtze to Shanghai, both rivers are filled with small steamers, launches, junks and sampans, many of which did yeoman service in transporting dismantled machinery from Hankow and the industrial coastal regions before the Japanese advance. Because of the war, the normal population of 100,000 has been swelled by refugees, government officials, and war workers.

Some of the most vital industries have taken up their quarters inside the cave dugouts, so that they will not be forced to discontinue operations during air raids. One of these is the publishing plant of Ta Kung Pao, China's leading newspaper, which has moved five times since the war drove it from its original home in Tientsin.

Some of the dugouts have wooden walls, electric lights, radio connections and telephones. One of Chungking's most modern hospitals, consisting of operating rooms, laboratories, operates underground.

China Rebuilds as Japs Destroy

Residents of Chungking, war capital of China, dodge Japanese bombs daily and crudely rebuild their homes between raids, using bamboo poles for walls and straw mats for roofs. Above, inset shows native doctors carrying a war stricken victim into one of the underground hospitals, blasted out of solid rock in the hills about Chungking. This one has 20 cave-rooms, joined by tunnels and equipped with operating room, research laboratory, wards and kitchen. Medical equipment and drugs are being sent there from the United China Relief campaign fund, now being collected in this country.

German-Americans Form Organization To Oppose Hitler

NEW YORK.—Formation of the "Loyal Americans of German Descent," a militant pro-democracy, anti-Nazi organization to act as center of practical guidance "for the 10,000,000 Americans of German descent, on whom the Nazis have been working for the past eight years," has been announced. The organization has directors, sponsors and charter members in 18 states.

Headed by Robert F. Wagner Jr., state assemblyman of New York, as president, and Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter college, as chairman of the board, the organization has secured the support of nationally known political, management and labor leaders.

The "Loyal Americans of German Descent" stated: "Every American, whether native born, naturalized or prospective citizen, must take a clear-cut stand today. Any sympathy with Nazi-Germany is completely irreconcilable with Americanism. Through forthright action, if necessary by the ultimate sacrifice of life, we shall meet the challenge with which destiny confronts us in the shape of Hitler and his henchmen."

"We consider it our duty to meet the Nazis wherever they may have enjoyed even partial success among the 10,000,000 Americans of German extraction. The misled must be guided back to the American way of life from which they have strayed through ignorance, misinformation or lack of guidance. We shall convince them that their own well-being, this country and democracy are worth a fight to the finish. We challenge Adolf Hitler's claim that the 10,000,000 Americans of German descent are bound by ties of blood to follow him as leader. We warn our fellow citizens not to be deceived by clever Hitler agents, alien or native, or by anybody else who, blindly or willingly plays into Hitler's hands.

Ideals Stated.

"We urge every loyal American of German descent—citizens and prospective citizens—to join us in notifying Adolf Hitler, his agents and the world at large: that Hitler is dead wrong; that men and women of German descent in America despise the slavery and tyranny and inhumanity which his terror imposed on the German people; that we are ready to fight for freedom and independence here and everywhere; that side by side with all our fellow citizens of many origins we shall uphold American unity by proclaiming our unalterable faith in democracy; that we shall not be fooled by traitors of Quisling or whatever stripe; that far from finding us a stepping stone into America, Hitler's followers shall founder against the rock of our opposition!"

Directors of the organization include: Karl Brandt, economist, Food Research Institute, Stanford University, Calif.; Gotthilf P. Bronisch, executive vice president, New York; Elisabeth Christman, secretary-treasurer, National Women's Trade Union league, Washington, D. C.; Carl Holderman, regional director, Textile Workers union (C. I. O.), Newark, N. J.; Clara Leiser, writer, New York; Mrs. William Allan Neilson, Falls Village, Conn.; F. Wilhelm Sollmann, Wallingford, Pa.; Edward J. Volz, president, International Photo Engravers union, New York; Felix Wittmer, professor, N. J. State Teachers college, Montclair, N. J.

Expect 1941 Record Farm Crop

LaSalle Map of Business Conditions

Major factors in present and expected farm prosperity are climbing food prices and a big harvest in prospect. Purchasing power increases as wheels again hum busily in factories over the nation.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President La Salle Extension University.

CHICAGO.—The upward trend in farm income continues, with prices now averaging higher than any time since 1930, except for a short period of 1937. The growing season to date has been very good for nearly all crops, and if the weather continues favorable, the harvest this year is expected to be the largest on record.

Markets for farm products are becoming better each month as the greatly increased industrial production of both military supplies and consumer goods has made pay rolls larger and has added to the purchasing power of workers in the cit-

On clear days during the "bombing season," which lasts from mid-May to October, the Japanese bombers usually come between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m., and both business men and housewives have accommodated their lives to the raids. Most government offices are open at night. School begins at 6 a. m., and banks are opened at 7 a. m. Housewives complete all their marketing and housework before the air raid, so that they can "eat rice" immediately after the all-clear.

ies. The total income is the largest in history, and still rising.

In addition to having their income increased by the greatly improved domestic market, farmers are also benefited by the government agricultural programs which are constantly being expanded and made more effective. These programs include payments for co-operation in soil conservation and control of acreage planted to major crops, higher loans on basic products, and government buying for relief purposes as well as under the lease-lend program. Government payments are about the same as last year, and account for a little over 6 per cent of the total cash income received by farmers.

A new ruling of the U. S. department of agriculture governing excess acreage tax on wheat makes it possible for farmers to avoid the 49-cents-per-bushel tax on wheat grown in excess of their 1941 marketing quotas. The department has announced that farmers who have exceeded their 1941 quotas may see less than their 1942 acreage allotments, and secure permission to sell their 1941 excess acreage without penalty. Farmers are urged to produce more dairy products, pork, beef, fruits, vegetables, tomatoes and beans.

Power Supply Is Toughest Problem in Defense Production . . .
Panama Canal Protection Worries United States Officials.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The toughest nut to crack in the national defense picture, so far as production is concerned, is admittedly electricity. The point is that it takes longer to construct a power plant than almost any of the defense plants for which such power will be needed.

It takes longer to construct a hydro plant than a steam plant, but even the steam plants require more time than airplane factories, motor factories, or even plants for manufacturing explosives.

Hence the need for conservation already manifested during the recent drought in the Southeast, and expected to occur in almost every section of the country.

To meet this situation, while waiting for the new electric plants to be completed, an elaborate conservation system has been worked out by J. A. Krug, head of the power division of OPM, and Leland Olds, head of the Federal Power commission.

Pool Arrangement Is Fundamental Idea

The fundamental idea of the conservation plan, leaving out details for the construction of new plants at strategic points, is the grid or pool arrangement. Obviously, every power system in the country, whether privately or publicly owned, maintains a reserve. In other words it seeks to have a capacity well in excess of any reasonable demand which may suddenly occur.

Assuming that in an ordinary-sized distribution system this reserve is 10,000 kilowatts above whatever is the peak load, there would be this huge block of power which might be made available for national defense production. So the idea is to tie all the systems together—then one reserve of 10,000 kilowatts might do for 10 systems, say, while the reserves of nine of them, or 90,000 kilowatts, would be available for defense production.

It is not as simple as it sounds, of course. One difficulty is the heavy loss of power if electricity is conducted a long distance. But the pool system takes care of this.

Atlantic Outposts And Panama Canal

President Roosevelt would like to do something about the Cape Verde islands, the Azores, Canary islands and Dakar, especially if and when—and Washington really leaves out the "if" in this connection, leaving only "when"—Germany moves into Spain and Portugal. But there is no certainty that anything WILL be done. There are many difficulties, not the least of which is the obvious reluctance of congress to permit the use of the army outside the Western hemisphere.

Obviously there are two reasons for the President's desire; one is that occupation of these islands and Dakar by the Germans (Vichy is already hinting for German help in "defending" Dakar) would provide just that many more points of attack for the Nazis in the battle of the Atlantic. It would increase the problem of keeping Britain supplied with munitions, food and planes. Incidentally the supply of planes is gradually fading out of this problem, as more and more of them are flown over.

The other, and perhaps even more important reason, is the Nazi menace to South America which thereby would be intensified.

Wrapped in the same bundle is protection for the Panama canal. Officials here have been worried about the canal for some time. It is part of the whole Latin American problem. Destruction of the Canal, or at least its temporary blocking by explosions in the locks, is one of the important elements—to this country—of the various Nazi moves with the object of taking over the governments of certain South American countries.

This also goes for Central American countries. It is known, for instance, that Guatemala has been told by Nazi agents that if Germany wins the war Guatemala can have British Honduras. If you will examine a map of Central America it will be obvious, even without knowing the complicated history of that part of the world, how tempting a prize this would be for Guatemala.

One may remember that Poland was eager to seize part of Czechoslovakia when Germany was looting that country, that Russia took part of Poland later under similar circumstances, to be followed by taking part of Rumania later. One might think Guatemala would fear to get British Honduras, if the Germans won, because all Guatemala would later become a German colony. But for some reason hard to explain it does not work that way. Most nations seem to look only at the immediate next step, and figure that in some way they can prevent history from repeating itself.

The man sat still as the fortune-teller read his palm.
"See that line?" asked the mystic, pointing to the fellow's palm.
"Yes, I see it," he returned.
"What does it mean?"
"It means," said the fortune-teller, gravely, "that you are going to take a trip in the very near future. To Chicago, perhaps."
Leaving the fortune-teller the man headed for the railway station. "A ticket to Chicago, please," he said.
"Right, sir," replied the booking clerk. "Single or return?"
The fellow stuck out his palm. "I don't know," he said. "Take a look!"

INSTALLMENT FOUR

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

As the approaching canoe neared the Peterboro Garry said: "It's a birchbark, as you said, Blaise. We'll stop for a talk. Ask them if they ever saw any of the white men who have passed through here bound for Chibougamau."

Moved in an uncertain course toward the Peterboro.

"What's the matter with those birds?" demanded Red. "Never saw Indians travel in a zig-zag like that. They're always too saving of their elbow grease."

"Nor I," agreed the curious Finlay. "They're yawning all over the lake."

As he paddled Blaise was slowly nodding his black head, at the air-dale who lay at his knees. "Flame," he said with a chuckle, "w'at you t'ink de matter wid dose Injuns comin' in dat cano', eh?"

The air-dale looked into Brassard's swart face with its twinkling eyes.

"If you keep your mou't shut, I tell you, Flame," laughed Blaise. "Now don't say notin' to Garry and Red. Dose Injuns comin' in dat cano' bin up to have a look at M'sieu' Isadore and he give dem somet'in dat come in a bottle."

"By golly! You're right, Blaise!" Garry threw back from the bow. "It looks like Isadore's fire-water."

The canoes were soon within hailing distance and Blaise called:

"Kekway!" The Montagnais and Cree salutation.

He was answered by a chrous of "Kekways" from the birchbark, in which sat two men, a squaw and a child. The eyes of the men were bloodshot and swollen. As the canoes stopped alongside of each other Blaise began a rapid questioning. Shortly he turned a face black with anger and disgust and announced to the curious Garry and Red:

"Dey are Matagami hunter but dey go to Isadore to trade dere winter hunt for fur, instead of de Hudson Bay, becuz he sell dem whiskey. But only half dey trade for flour, sugar and tea dey will need. De rest dey trade for whiskey."

The muscles of Finlay's face tightened as he asked: "Did they see any of the men who went through bound for Chibougamau?"

"No," answered Blaise, "dey see no white man pass tru de lake last two year."

Brassard talked rapidly for some time while the Montagnais grew excited, often interrupting him.

"What is it?" demanded Garry.

"Dey say dere is moch talk at Waswanipi. Dere is troubl' between Chief Wabistan and a shaman by name of Kinebik. Dis Kinebik is fr'en of Tete-Blanche. Chief Wabistan fight wid Tete-Blanche at the trade ovaiv whiskey he give to Injun. Dey say dat de Injun like de whiskey and are scare of Tete-Blanche. He is ver' bad fallar. Dey are scare of Isadore, al-so. Dey are scare of de big bird from de south."

"Ah-hah! It come tru de sky from de south, each summer. Dey are ver' moch scare of it."

"Airplane, eh? So he has a plane come from the south every summer? That, Red, is the way he brings in his whiskey."

"Sure as you live, boss! Have these people ever seen the plane, Blaise?"

"No, but oders have and dey tell strange story."

"Ask them if Batoche, with the scarred face, and Flambeau have reached Isadore's post."

Blaise put the question and after a lengthy answer, from the talkative Montagnais, replied: "Dey say dat Batoche and Flambeau reach Waswanipi w'ile dey trade de fur. Wan night, Batoche, he get drunk, and he say: 'T'ree man wid dog leave de steel for Chibougamau Trail, but de Long Sault of de Nottaway swallow dem. Batoche he say he saw de big wood cano' of white man all stov up below rapid and wan drown man on shore."

Blaise grinned widely as he continued: "But dis Montagnais, here in de bow, his name is Mahigan, de wolf, say dat we are t'ree men with dog in wooden cano', and wan wid bullet mark on hees head, and he ask me if we run de Long Sault. I say we did, for sure, and are live man, al-so. Den he say dat Batoche is ver' damn liar. I tell him dat Batoche is worse damn liar. He is dead man if I eavir put my hand on him. Mahigan say dere is too many man at Isadore for t'ree man to fight. We betfair go home."

"What was your answer?" demanded Garry.

"I say dat we hear dat Waswanipi is ver' fine lake and Isadore ver' fine man and we go take a look at dem bot'."

"Okay!" laughed Garry. "Well, let's go!"

CHAPTER V

Flanked by hills somber with the olive green of spruce splashed by the lighter hardwoods, the great Waswanipi Lake blazed like a floor of fire in the afternoon sun. The Peterboro rounded a long point and the maple blades trailed.

They find the Nottaway settlement people strangely averse to discussing the tragedies. The name of Isadore, rich fur man, when brought by Finlay, causes an immediate cessation of further conversation along that line. Isadore, it is thought, has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out. Finlay and Blaise are wounded in an ambush on the Nottaway. Proceeding, they saw a band of Indians approaching in their canoes.

"There it is!" exclaimed Finlay. "Let's have a look at Monsieur Isadore's outfit!" He raised his binoculars and gazed curiously at the group of buildings on the distant shore. "Why, Red, he's got living quarters fit for a king! Have a squint!"

Malone took the proffered glasses and studied the fur post miles across the burnished lake at the foot of a ridge of black spruce. "Fanciest log job I've seen east of the Rockies!" muttered Red.

Shortly Blaise returned the glasses with a grunt. "Ah-hah! Big place! Some day fox bark in dat clearin' and h'owl nest in de chimney."

"They will," agreed Finlay, "if we're worth our salt. See that group of islands about a mile offshore? We'll camp right there, leave Blaise and Flame, and, like polite surveyors in the bush, pay a call on Isadore."

"Come on!" urged Red, making the water boil behind his paddle. "This job begins to look interesting."

After a clean-up and shave Finlay and Malone left Blaise at their camp on the island and started for the post less than a mile distant. As they approached the shore the log residence of the trader compelled their admiration.

The stir of people in the post clearing indicated that the approach of the Peterboro was creating unusual interest. In front of the big log house a group of three were leveling glasses on the approaching boat.

"He's got living quarters fit for a king!"

Down at the landing men were evidently discussing the strangers. Garry raised his binoculars. "Two women in sporting togs, Red, giving us the once over! The man with them must be his highness, Czar Isadore, of Waswanipi."

"A bird just left the landing," exclaimed Malone, "and called Isadore away from the women! By the way he's waving his arms he's having an argument. Now he's gone back. Did you notice it?"

"Do you know who that was?"

"That was Batoche. I spotted him by his walk."

"The scar-faced rat!"

"We'll check up before we land," said Finlay, casing his glasses. "You've got extra shells in your pocket and the spare gun on your hip?"

"O-kay!"

"No identifying papers! Not a scrap to show who we are?"

"Check!"

"Our orders are to map this chain of big lakes, then the lower Nottaway, joining the main party in September."

"Right!"

"Now we haven't scratched the surface of this situation. So far it's been pure guesswork. We believe we're dealing with a coldblooded killer and a clever one. When we land here today to buy flour and bacon, what is he going to do? Batoche has told him that he wiped us out in the Long Sault. So our appearance has whipped him. That was probably the cause of the argument we noticed just now on the shore. Isadore's a worried man for he's in a jam with Ottawa if any of us get out alive."

"I'll say he's worried," agreed Red.

"If Batoche tells him what happened at the railroad, he knows we'll suspect that scar-faced crook. Although we can't tie Isadore up personally with that ambush, he realizes we can make it hot for him, for Batoche is his man."

Red nodded gravely as he studied his freckled fist. "To save his bacon," he said, "three more men have got to disappear on the Chibougamau Trail."

"That's the picture, Red."

"He'll ask us to supper; that's certain. He'll want to look us over before he makes his plans."

"We'll do some mindreading, ourselves. Then, after tonight, it's a case of wolf eat wolf, our brains and our luck against his."

Finlay's face grew bitter as he stared across the miles of quiet water to a blue ridge. "He got Bob! I'm going to get him!"

The Peterboro slid in to the stony beach where two men now awaited its coming. Up at the trade-house others watched while the girls in front of the house laughed as they talked.

"Welcome to Waswanipi, gentlemen!" A man of medium height with a black moustache and hair graying at the temples of a hawk-like face advanced with outstretched hand as Garry and Red left the canoe. "We see so few white men here that your visit is an event. I am Jules Isadore. This is my head man, Pierre Labelle."

"I'm Finlay, in charge of the survey," said Garry, shaking hands with the two men. "My assistant, Neil Malone! We need flour and bacon, Mr. Isadore. I suppose you can sell us some?"

The eyes of the two clashed in a look of mutual appraisement. "Delighted to, Mr. Finlay, and you'll join us at dinner? It will be a treat to my wife and daughter to talk to two handsome young men from the outside."

Garry laughed. "If the ladies will pardon our woolen shirts and bush clothes, we'll be glad to accept your hospitality, Mr. Isadore. You have a magnificent place here," he observed.

"The marten and black fox did it," Isadore answered. "We beat the Hudson's Bay at their own game. It's been a gold mine."

A gold mine! Garry's blood heated with his sudden anger. Was Isadore fishing—trying to draw him out so early? He watched from the tail of his eye the wooden face of Isadore's head man as he threw out: "Speaking of gold, they tell me there's a big rush on for the Chibougamau." But Labelle's face was vacant of expression.

"So I hear," replied Isadore. "Last year and the year before some poor fellows tried to get in by the Waswanipi but were drowned. Bad river that!"

"You're a cool proposition, Isadore," thought Garry. Then he said: "Yes, so your man Batoche told me at the railroad."

As Garry limped beside him, Isadore commented: "Hurt your leg?"

"Yes, slipped on a rock and twisted my knee!"

"Too bad!" Then Isadore's face lit as they reached the waiting girls. "Well, here's what makes life possible at Waswanipi. Corinne, this is Mr. Finlay and Mr. Malone, on the government survey. My wife, gentlemen, and my daughter, Lise."

Garrett Finlay was startled by the dark beauty of the two girls.

"Welcome to Waswanipi, Meestair Feenlay and Meestair—what was it?—Malone?" said the elder and smaller of the two with a slight accent as she extended her hand with a thrust of smoldering eyes.

Red Malone beamed like a boy with a new toy into Corinne Isadore's vivacious face, framed by a blue-black bob.

"What a break for two bored females!" As Lise gave him her firm hand, Finlay felt that he had never looked into a lovelier face or one more baffling. "Corinne and I were about ready to call it a summer in this fly-infested bush and scam, if Jules would send us." Her short upper lip curled as she archly added: "But if you're going to survey the lake we might."

"Might stay awhile if you prove as nice as you look!" There was frank challenge in her brilliant eyes.

"I like your smile, Mr. Surveyor," Miss Isadore surprised him with.

"Your teeth are flawless, aren't they? And how you know it! You have cute, crinkly hair and swell shoulders and, doubtless leave a trail of wailing women behind wherever you operate. But—" her eyes suddenly clouded, "I'd have you know that my name is not Isadore. He married my mother when I was very young. My name is Lise Demarais."

Garry raised a hand in protest. "Instead of an engineer who spends most of his time in the bush," he laughed, "you suggest I'm a lounge lizard. I object to the title. But I'll forgive you. Lise Demarais," he repeated, studying her vivid face with its warm undertone of color. "It's somehow like you."

Suddenly she grew silent while his eyes furtively sought the ripples of her dusky hair, the short nose with its delicate nostrils and the sensitive, full-lipped mouth. He had a feeling that her gaiety had been forced—that she was under a strain. Had he and Red walked into a trap and did Lise know it?

They reached the house and with a wave of the hand Lise joined Corinne Isadore. Finlay watched the little figure of the girl disappear through the door. Had his judgment been wrong? Was Jules Isadore planning something for that evening and did she know it?

PETER ENCOURAGES SUFFERING CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 4:12-19; 5:6-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf.—I Peter 4:16.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity"—so says the poet, and it is true that God is able to make even the sufferings of man a source of blessing and an occasion for joy. "If a man suffer as a Christian" (1 Pet. 4:16). In a world where sorrow and suffering have been heaped high by man's inhumanity to man, it is indeed appropriate that we think of the encouragement which God's Word gives to those who are in distress.

There are many helpful Scripture passages on this point, those before us today being from the writings of Peter to the Jews of the dispersion. Scattered abroad and no more under the guiding and protecting hand of Paul, Luke and the others, they were undergoing severe persecution for Christ's sake. Some were apparently disturbed by their trials, and Peter tells them that persecution should bring

I. No Surprise (4:12).

We ought to expect trials in this world; yes, severe fiery trials. Such things are common to all mankind, and the Christian should not expect to escape. To them, such trials are real tests of their faith, an opportunity to show to the unbelieving world that God is able to deliver those who put their trust in Him!

To be forewarned is to be forearmed. "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial."

II. No Shame (4:13-16).

There are two senses in which the Christian is to be unashamed in the midst of suffering. In the first instance, he is not to be ashamed of the trial itself if he bears it for Christ's sake, for he is thus sharing Christ's sufferings. We cannot share in his substitutionary and sacrificial suffering on Calvary, but we can stand with Him who was indeed "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief" (Isa. 53:3). In the second place, he is not to do anything which would justify others in making him suffer. It is a disgrace, a shame which injures the cause of Christ, when a believer has to suffer because he has broken the law, or because he is "a busybody (R. V. "meddler") in other men's matters." If you pry into others' affairs, expect to have your fingers stepped on, and don't expect God to deliver you out of it or honor you in that kind of suffering.

III. No Escape (4:17-19).

If the righteous find the difficulties and temptations in their way to be like fiery trials, if those who have the blessed presence of Christ to cheer and to guide them find it difficult at times to make their way through sorrow and sadness, what will the unbeliever do? Does he think that he shall escape? Surely not—and there is yet that day ahead when the believer shall enter into eternal peace, where sorrow and suffering shall be no more. Where will the unbeliever be in that day?

IV. No Worry (5:6, 7).

"Put care into Christ's bag," said George Herbert. "Treat your cares as you treat your sins. Hand them over to Jesus one by one as they occur, commit them to Him" (F. B. Meyer). He really cares about you—believe it and act upon it. The cure for all worry is right there, but even as it is true that the meek shall "inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5), so it is true that only the humble are ready to cast their cares on the Lord. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble. . . . Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up" (James 4:6, 10).

V. No Wavering (5:8-11).

"Steady, perfected and established in Christ, strengthened by His grace, sure of the eternal call, and with the eye of faith on the glory to come, such is the man who is able and ready to successfully meet the devil when, like a roaring lion, he seeks to disturb and devour God's people."

Satan is busy in our day. Dr. Wilbur M. Smith says: "It is admitted everywhere by outstanding Christian leaders, in every sphere of life today, that there has never been a time, at least in our generation, when the temptations of Satan have been so fierce, so frequent, so constant, as just now. What Satan wants to do is to destroy the testimony of God's people, to take them out of places of power and influence for the gospel, to rob them of that joy, and victory, and power, by which, through their labors, others will be brought to confess the Lord Jesus Christ. Christian people today who are conscious of being fiercely assailed by evil ought not to be alarmed, but should realize that this experience of theirs is general, everywhere, of true believers, and that there is sufficient grace for every need in such dreadful times as these."

This is a true story of one of the most romantic rogues who ever rode the range of the old west. His lightning draw was unmatched in all the west... his smile was as quick as his trigger finger... his records of battles and duels were never equaled, yet his romances outnumbered them all. He was a Robin Hood to his friends as he was a savage scourge, sweeping law and order aside. Donlevy is cast in the role of his best friend and Miss Howard as Donlevy's romantic interest. They both attempt to curb his law breaking career, but with little avail. Donlevy becomes sheriff of the town and beats the "Kid" to the draw in a gun battle. With the death of the famed "Kid" the story comes to a roaring finish. This is truly a picture for your "must see" list.

This Friday and Saturday the Roxy theatre will feature "The Sea Wolf" with Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino and John Garfield.

Derbyshire Singin' Sam Prototype of Modern Sam

EARNEST and somewhat disheveled, the glamour boy at the left is none other than Singin' Sam of Derbyshire, who posed for this portrait way back in 1760. He was the original Singin' Sam—a troubadour who strove to please. No Albert Spalding with the fiddle and certainly no Lawrence Tibbett when it came to singing, Sam, nevertheless, had his following. His audience wasn't as big as that of the modern Singin' Sam, right, who boasts millions of listeners a day. But then the eighteenth century Sam did not have the benefit of radio—which probably is just as well. At any rate the Sams have much in common. True, the "Refreshment Time" Sam has 40 million radio listeners per week, but then, Sam, "The Hitch-Hiking Troubadour" had the pleasure of choosing his audiences.

Farewell dear mother, sweet thy rest,
Weary with years and worn with pain,

'Tis ours to miss thee, all our years,
And tender memories of thee keep
Thine in the Lord to rest, for so,
He giveth his beloved sleep.

O'Daniel of Texas Joins the Fight

Elected by the people only a few weeks ago as United States Senator from a supposedly interventionist state, W. Lee O'Daniel of Texas scored the Administration forces in his first speech in the Senate last Tuesday.

The speech came as a shock to the Washington war-makers and added a new Senator to the bloc fighting the draft extension.

AMERICA ON GUARD!

Above is a reproduction of the Treasury Department's Defense Savings Poster, showing an exact duplication of the original "Minute Man" statue by famed sculptor Daniel Chester French. Defense Bonds and Stamps, on sale at your bank or post office, are a vital part of America's defense preparations.

Statements such as these indicate that the Texas Senator will be a fresh tower of strength to the other Senators and Congressmen who have been fighting the long, hard battle to keep the country out of war!

Said Senator O'Daniel: "I fail to find in the Constitution of the United States any authority to legislate granted to anybody except to the congress of the United States. So long as I occupy a position in the Senate I shall use my own judgement in determining such questions."

"I am against dictatorship and dictatorial methods, whether they be exercised by the governments of Italy, Russia, Germany, or if they be exercised by some particular class, group or individual in America."

"I believe in honor and integrity and when our government breaks faith with our soldier boys we are abandoning democracy and following the path of the dictator."

Write Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C. Let him know he has your support, urge him to throw every effort into the fight against war. We must show Senator O'Daniel that he is championing the cause of the people not only of his native state of Texas, but every State in the Union. Eighty per cent of the people are with him. Write him a note of encouragement.

The F. H. Halvorsen Real Estate Company at Oak Lawn gives service which is quite a factor in the development of the home life of this community, and they are offering the people homes at prices that are very attractive.

They will show you a home all finished and how these homes are being built, the modernity of detail and the superiority of construction. Years ago most anyone could build a home at a reasonable price, but today the business of home building has come into prominence on account of the great increase in the prices of materials and labor. They can secure materials direct from the mills and factories and uses economies in construction so that he can build the home cheaper for you than you can build it yourself. There is no cheapening of materials, only the economies of large business.

They are to be commended upon keeping the home spirit alive in this community, and we desire to call the attention of the public to the desirability of seeing them before anyone should undertake to buy or build.

The future of Real Estate in this section is one that is creating much discussion at the present time and it is conceded that real estate property located will during the coming years increase in value many times as the section grows more settled.

Furnishing adequate transportation service to a group of communities is an important business involving angles of safety, comfort and dependability that the lay person seldom considers, but the fact that they have linked these important items with progressive policies largely accounts for the satisfactory business of the Suburban Transit System, and the fact that it witnesses a constantly steady increase in business.

This concern operates through Chicago and its Suburban areas and immediate points throughout this entire area making connections with all important points, so their service forms an endless chain.

CHUCKS FOOD MART

QUALITY MEATS, GROCERIES, FRUITS AND VEGETABLES
FREE DELIVERY SERVICE

3316 W. 95th Street,

Evergreen Park. Phone 7260

One of Evergreen Park's leading stores feature a complete line of meats and groceries and fresh fruits, vegetables in season.

They employ a force of clerks, each one of whom is a genius in doing and saying the accommodating thing to their customer. It is the rule and principle of their business to do more for their customers than simply sell them groceries and their customers appreciate this almost as much as they do the high quality of groceries and meat offered from day to day.

Chuck's Food Mart give special inducements to out-of-town customers and they handle a full and complete line of staple and fancy groceries of standard brands and are always first with fresh fruits in season and country produce. Their stocks of canned goods are always of the best brand and are always kept fresh.

Being large dealers they purchase in such large quantities that they are able to undersell many similar concerns, and their customers reap the benefit of their increased buying power.

Chuck's Food Mart is popular and has won the admiration and friendship of the entire community and in this review of 1941 we are glad to compliment Chuck's Food Mart on the part they are taking in the life of their community and recommend them to all of our readers.

No pioneer Industrial, Commercial or Professional Review would be complete without prominent and notable mention of this great aggressive and leading concern.

Robert Bartlett in Chicago in the Real estate business has been established for almost 40 years and his successful ventures are too numerous to mention here.

Any business to be permanently successful must be founded on principles of honesty and fair dealing and full value for the price asked. From this there can be no deviation, regardless of economic or other conditions.

Every successful business in the United States, the ones that have started from a small beginning, and have endured year after year, are built on an ideal. That ideal has always included a self imposed obligation to keep faith with the public by maintaining values the year round regardless of conditions.

The Robert Bartlett Realty and Development Co. started with an ideal. Through good times and bad that ideal has never been violated. To it all subsequent success must be credited.

Here the public has at its disposal the services of people who possess the knowledge and who obtained their business education in the school of practical experience. From the inception of the enterprise, values have been maintained from the beginning.

This great company pioneered our Thriving Section of Oaklawn, Evergreen Park, Stickney, Palos Park, Palos Park Heights years ago and sold acreage in parcels of one-half to five acres for prices that today, a single lot would cost from its present owners double the amount paid for acreage, and today we are proud and glad to state in this Pioneer Review that we have with us a company that is developing and doing more for this great region than any other six Companies, Corporations or Individuals. The writer knows, when the firm of Robert Bartlett Realty, Investment and Development Co. (not Inc.) starts out, things happen fast and furious. It is a real treat to drive over this section and almost unbelievable to see what this company has done in the way of building FINE AMERICAN Homes.

The satisfaction of owning your own home is something everyone should experience. Today, while materials are low priced and good labor is plentiful, is the time to act. Build that home you have wanted so long. Homes in this section built by them stand as memorials to the quality of their work.

They use the best of materials and have the finest homesites, and will explain to you exactly what will be done, having a most efficient corps of assistants and performing all work according to the building codes, underwriters regulations and methods used by masters in their trade.

Robert Bartlett offers a complete service and has designed and built many beautiful homes and buildings over South Cook County.

The present building campaign is making them very busy but they are prepared for prompt service.

Whether the job be large or small makes no difference in the manner in which it is accomplished. The best homesite, the best material the best workmanship and fair prices regulate their activities, and it is without fear of contradiction that we say one cannot do better than to consult them in regard to all things pertaining to this work and allied features.

Their increasing patronage and the demand for their services are adequate proof that it pays to serve the people to the best of ones ability as they have always done. Their excellent services are constantly making this country a better place in which to live and we wish to bring before the people the fact that their work is always competent, artistic and honest.

Therefore in this 1941 Pioneer Business Review, we refer the Robert Bartlett Realty and Development Co. to all of our readers as one worthy of their fullest support and their patronage.

Any business to be permanently successful must be founded upon principle, honesty, fair dealings and full value for the price asked. From this there can be no deviation regardless of economic or any other conditions.

In such a period as the one thru which we have just passed, merchants and industrialists have been confronted with many problems. In seeking the solution there has often been the strong provocation to resort to expediencies that in normal times would never be considered.

Every successful business in our great nation started from a small beginning and was built on an ideal. That ideal was to keep the good will of the public and its employees regardless of conditions.

The Gaston Power Tools Co. not only provides employment to a great number of our people and brings many thousands of dollars into our community annually, but at the same time it pays its employees well and furnishes means where by they can live and raise their families under the most ideal conditions.

To maintain this company means the continued prosperity to this great region, therefore in looking forward to a still greater community, each and every one of us should at all times be cognizant of the higher ideals upon which this company was founded and upon which it is being operated.

EVERGREEN PARK PLUMBING CO.

Adolph Leverenz, Proprietor and Licensed Contractor

SANITARY PLUMBING AND SEWERAGE—GAS FITTINGS

Philco Radio, and Electric Ice Boxes, Tubes and Supplies.

Office: 3156 W. 95th St. Telephone: Evergreen Park 7130

Excellent plumbing service. No job too small, none too large. Also feature plumbing fixtures and supplies, pipe fittings of all kinds and sewer work. Sewers cleaned without digging. Satisfaction guaranteed. Call for estimates. We handle the Cadet Electric Water Heater.

In plans for home modernizing there probably is not a more important set-up in the program than that pertaining to plumbing and new plumbing fixtures. There are few homes today that are not in need of plumbing improvements of one type or another.

A firm equipped to take care of these demands and which also will cooperate with the home owner in a financing plan or will finance thru the National Housing Act is the Evergreen Park Plumbing Company.

This firm does not confine its service solely to Evergreen Park, but will go any place in this section or nearby localities, which is a most advantageous service for communities.

This firm engages in heating service, air conditioning, ventilating systems and power pipe equipment.

Bathrooms, kitchens and basements can be made more convenient, the drudgery taken out of housework, the home made more livable and sanitary with new additions of plumbing fixtures or changes in plumbing systems. It is the foundation on which home modernizing plans should be laid. Many home owners are of the opinion that installations of this kind are expensive, but under present plans charges are reasonable not only on labor but on fixtures, the plumbing investment not only adds materially to property value but actually provides comforts otherwise impossible.

Patrons of this establishment have the advantage, when doing business here, of practical experience in the plumbing, heating, ventilating, air conditioning and power piping industry and scientific knowledge of its practices as well. They are recognized for dexterous service, whether the job is a large or small one. It can be stated also that their prices are no higher, and being equipped to do your work properly it is to the advantage of the home owner securing service such as they capably render.

Local people can either write them or when you are in Evergreen Park stop in and inquire about merchandise, installation or service, as well as about financing arrangements which they will secure for you. You will find that your dealings with the Evergreen Park Plumbing Company will be thoroughly satisfactory.

Riverview Presents 'Mardi Gras Carnival'

Chicago's festival of fun, Riverview's "Mardi Gras Carnival" begins Saturday evening, August 16, climaxing the final four weeks of the Parks current season.

This year's Carnival will be highlighted by a mile-long parade of beautiful floats, clowns and costumed revellers. The theme of the Carnival this year is "Music on Parade" with thirteen elaborate floats depicting popular American songs. A few of the "minute-tableaux" are: "We are all Americans Now," "Alice Blue Gown," "Song of the Islands," and "Every Girls Dream." Two comedy floats, "Six two and Even" and "Cry Baby Cry" will be a featured part of the parade, presented nightly at eight.

Mr. Geo. Schmidt, president of Riverview, is inviting all costumed revellers to the Park free any evening during the Carnival. In addition, those in costume will be given complimentary rides on many of the Parks attractions.

As a fitting setting for the huge Carnival, Riverview's two mile mid-way will be festooned with gay bunting, flags, banners and confetti booths. The Carnival will be presented nightly until the season closes, Sunday, September 7, at midnight.

To Collect Blood

The American Red Cross blood collection program, to provide blood plasma for the armed forces, will be extended to the Chicago area within the next two months, at the request of the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy. In addition to Chicago, collection depots are to be set up in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and San Francisco. Seven eastern cities are now engaged in the project.

Ten thousand donations of blood, processed into dry plasma and hermetically sealed, already have been placed aboard U. S. fighting ships engaged in the Atlantic sea patrol. An additional 200,000 donors will be needed to fill the current requests of the military and naval forces.

Advantages of blood plasma are that it can be stored indefinitely in dehydrated form and can be used without regard to different blood types. Plasma is the watery fluid that carries blood corpuscles throughout the body. The plasma is separated from the corpuscles by a centrifugal process which works on the same principle as a cream separator. The plasma is then dried. In powder form, it may be used for transfusions merely by adding distilled water.

Mr. Roger Holden, manager of the Chicago Chapter, in talks over Radio Station WCBD on July 23rd and 28th has gone into this matter very thoroughly explaining in detail the use of the plasma, how the donors are enrolled, how the blood is taken, how the blood is processed into dried plasma, how the plasma is distributed and finally how the Red Cross plans to do its part in the national program.

So many requests have been received for copies of these broadcasts that they have been mimeo-

"CLEAN" SOLDIERS BEST

...SO U. S. ARMY BUILDS CHAPELS

"We are determined to have a 'clean' army, morally and physically," General George C. Marshall, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, said Sunday, July 27, at the dedication of the first of 555 identical chapels the War Department is building at army camps throughout the country.

Shown welcoming James J. Norris, administrative assistant for the National Catholic Community Service, and Daniel Culhane, national program director for the N. C. S. to the colorful ceremonies held at Arlington cantonment near Washington, D. C., General Marshall told the two and others who braved a blazing July sun for the simple but impressive dedicatory ceremony "these chapels will make a major contribution to that end." White frame, and with movable altar within, the chapels will be used by Catholics, Protestants and Jews alike. FOR A REAL TASTE THRILL, COOK IT OUTSIDE
(See Recipes Below)

OUTDOOR SUPPERS

If you've a longing to do something different, an outdoor supper's the answer. Get the smell of woody smoke into your food, the crackle of burning embers for atmosphere, the sound of sizzling meat held over glowing flames during the supper hour and you'll experience a taste-thrill you'll long remember. Everything tastes better cooked outdoors!

Toss some cans of beans into a gay kerchief, wrap fruit, cookies, cake into waxed paper, whip up some barbecue sauce to use with the meat, and the meal is under way.

Outdoor cooking equipment may be as humble as a few large bricks, an iron grate, or an extra rack from the oven, a long handled fork for each member of the family. A light camping stove or a more elaborate grill such as a vertical or horizontal stove of sheet steel including drip and ashpans, a roasting spit, and warming shelves may also be used. Whatever you use, remember, it's the cooking outdoors which makes the meal.

You will want meat and plenty of it for fresh air whips up the appetite. The family will come back again and again for this delicious meat with a sauce all its own:

Tomato Horseradish Mustard Marinade.

For 3 pounds of spareribs or beef short ribs use:

- 2 tablespoons prepared horseradish mustard sauce
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 cup tomato juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 onions, chopped fine

Combine dry and liquid materials well and beat thoroughly. Place meat in a shallow bowl or glass dish and cover with the marinade. Turn every 3 or 4 hours and marinate in refrigerator for 48 hours. Drain meat well before barbecuing and baste frequently while cooking over coals. The marinade may be thickened and served as a sauce over the meat. Your barbecuing will be more successful if you marinate the meat. It's especially good on the less expensive cuts.

If you'd like a meal-in-one with a minimum of fuss but nourishment plus, try this potato salad made with frankfurters. If you're accustomed to your old and cherished potato salad recipe, I'm still sure that you'll like this one:

Frankfurter Potato Salad.

(Serves 6)

- 3 medium sized potatoes, cooked, diced
- 1 cup diced celery
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 pound frankfurters, skinned and sliced
- 3/4 cup salad dressing
- French dressing

Marinate the potatoes in the french dressing. Combine all ingre-

LYNN SAYS:

While cooking under the sky over hot coals you'll want to remember:

Charcoal burns to fine, lasting coals and gives a nice steady fire for barbecue cookery. For best results when using either charcoal or wood should be burned until the flames disappear. Then the meat should be placed 8 to 10 inches above the coals and turned every few minutes to insure even cooking.

Hard woods like oak, hickory, madrone, manzanita and maple give a lasting glowing bed of coals. Soft pine is suitable for quick grilling like hamburger and hot dogs.

Whatever type of grill you use, pick a spot that's shady, not too far from the kitchen if you're doing it in the back yard and not too near heavy shrubbery.

dients and mix with potatoes. Chill 1 hour and serve with lettuce.

If you decide on hamburgers some night for your open grill stove try them this way: Add 15 per cent suet to your regular meat. Press the uncooked hamburger into thin flat cakes between waxed paper. Put two cakes together with a filling made from finely chopped raw onion mixed with steak sauce and rich prepared mustard, pressing the edges of the cakes firmly together. Broil quickly on both sides. Serve on large, toasted buns which have been buttered.

Here are two variations you may wish to follow if you serve baked beans often:

Maple Beans—Substitute 1/2 cup maple syrup or three tablespoons maple sugar for brown sugar and molasses.

Baked Beans with Sausage—Arrange parboiled beans and uncooked sausage in alternate layers; substitute 1 can tomato soup for molasses and part of water.

Boiled Campfire Coffee.

(1 quart)
4 heaping tablespoons coffee
4 cups boiling water
1 egg

Combine the coffee and egg in the pot and mix thoroughly. Pour in water and bring slowly to a full boil, stirring coffee down in a warm place for 3 to 5 minutes. Use 1/4 cup cold water to settle grounds.

Easy to make but easier to take is this cocoa cake made with sour cream. Even if you want to serve it with the richer ice creams you won't feel too stuffed with it because it is light textured and feathery. If there is no sour cream to be had sweet milk can be substituted, but use it with 2 teaspoons of baking powder instead of the soda.

*Sour Cream Cocoa Cake.

(Makes 2 9-inch layers)
1/2 cup cocoa
3/4 cup boiling water
1/2 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
2 cups sifted cake flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites

Mix cocoa in boiling water and stir until smooth. Cool. Cream shortening and sugar together until light, then add cocoa. Sift the dry ingredients and add alternately with cream to the first mixture. Beat until smooth after each addition. Add vanilla then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour batter into pans lined with wax paper, and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees) 30 minutes. Put together with Chocolate Icing.

2 cups confectioners' sugar
3 tablespoons butter
2 ounces melted chocolate
Milk to moisten
Vanilla

Cream butter and sugar, add melted chocolate, milk, and vanilla and beat until smooth. Spread between layers and over cake.

*Refrigerator Cookies.

(Makes 7 1/2 dozen)
1 cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
1 egg
1 cup oven popped rice cereal
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder

Cream butter; add sugar gradually and beat until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Stir in cereal. Sift flour with baking powder and work into first mixture, a small amount at a time. Knead and shape into rolls about 1 1/2 inches in diameter; wrap in waxed paper, covering ends so that dough will not dry out. Store in refrigerator until firm. Cut into thin slices and bake on ungreased cookie sheet in moderately hot oven (425 degrees) about 10 minutes.

The Last Battle

By MEREDITH SCHOLL

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

IT HAPPENED during the so-called "Mexican" war—that period of time during which the United States government sent a flock of troops over the border to protect honor, life, property and to catch Villa.

Garfield Nichols, who was then considered one of the foremost newspaper correspondents in the East, despite his lack of consideration for expense accounts, his humorous viewpoint on things that newspaper editors regarded as vitally important (including the Mexican war), and his frankly admitted weakness for intoxicating beverages of any description—despite all these things Garfield was dispatched posthaste for Mexico as representative of the Boston Express to serve in the capacity of war correspondent.

Old Man Upton, the Express' managing editor, knew what he was about. He knew that Garfield, because of his various weaknesses, couldn't be depended upon to stay sober for more than four or five hours at a time, but he knew also, that Garfield had the gift of setting words down on paper in such a way as to attract and hold the attention of New England's news-thirsty public. Personally Upton wasn't so sold on the "war" himself, but he knew that Garfield Nichols would send back dispatches that would fairly seethe and boil with war news of a convincing nature.

And so Garfield departed for the Mexican border with a pocket full of expense money, passports, letters of identity and a head full of old man Upton's detailed instructions.

He lived in the saloon, alternating his time between dodging bullets and writing.

Two weeks later the Express' managing editor received an urgent request from its war correspondent for additional funds amounting to $100. Accompanying the wire was another, several paragraphs in length, in which Garfield had set down the latest developments in the war.

Upton checked the story with the leased wire dispatches, found that they tallied in minor details only, and was a trifle puzzled. Garfield's story was glamorous and this was what the public wanted. Hence, the story was published, under Garfield's by-line, and the $100 expense money forwarded.

From that point forward stories from Garfield concerning the war began to arrive at the rate of one every two days. They were exceptionally fine yarns, and would have substantiated old man Upton's rashness in engaging the famous Garfield in every respect, had it not been for one thing. Each story in the order of its receipt was found to be a little further removed from other stories that were flashed over the country by the various news services which had also dispatched correspondents to Mexico. But to offset this, Garfield's yarns were, in point of literature, new and interesting reading, far ahead of any other dispatches that came in daily on the Express' leased wire service.

Fortunately, the American public is gullible; they were eager and willing to believe that the developments in Mexico as published by the Express were correct. They liked the sound of Garfield's stuff, hence circulation figures soared during the first few weeks of Garfield's sojourn.

It wasn't until almost a month had elapsed that old man Upton really began to get worried. During the past four weeks Garfield had asked for and received three hundred extra dollars for expenses. And during the past seven days his stories had not tallied in a single instance with leased wire dispatches.

In order to satisfy a growing suspicion, old man Upton got together every wire that had come from Garfield, dug out a map of Mexico, brought to hand certain established facts concerning the war, and set to work. At the end of an hour he had discovered that his war correspondent had been at one time within 100 miles of the war zone, and this was as near as he ever got. Putting two and six together Managing Editor Upton arrived at the conclusion that Correspondent Nichols had been on one big bust since the day he entered Mexico. Employing his imagination, augmented by fragmentary bits of information, Garfield had doubtlessly set down on paper a story concerning the war of a nature that he knew would appeal to Upton and the American public, but which had little if any regard for actual developments in the war.

Five hours later Garfield Nichols received a telegram of dismissal in his room at Majorca, Mexico, and promptly went out to drown his sorrows in the village's only saloon.

At dawn the next day Garfield was seated beneath a table in the same saloon singing all four verses of "America." His sorrows had been very completely drowned; he was in an especially jovial mood.

At the exact moment that the last word of the last stanza died on Garfield's lips, a cannon boomed on the outskirts of the town, shattering every window in the saloon.

Garfield crawled from his hide-out and stood erect. Another cannon boomed, and the building shook. Garfield looked around. The place was deserted. He looked into the street, and found it empty, too. But as he watched he saw little puffs of smoke emerge from the windows of buildings close by, and heard the sharp reports of rifle fire.

Partly sobered, entirely disconcerted, Garfield scurried into the saloon's back room and found there a dozen fierce looking Mexicans, lined up at barricaded windows and doors.

After some difficulty the correspondent learned that a sudden turn of events had carried the fighting out of the hills and into the desert country. The deciding battle of the fracas was being fought then and there in the little town of Majorca.

Garfield groaned and sat down. For more than a month he had attempted, and with no little success to escape the war, and now it had come to him. As far as he knew he was the only white man in the place, to be sure the only newspaper correspondent.

The battle lasted three days. And, strangely enough, Garfield remained sober during that time. He remained sober in the midst of hundreds of bottles of every kind of liquor he had ever tasted, at hand for the taking. He lived in the saloon, alternating his time between dodging bullets and writing the story of the most famous battle of the war.

As fate would have it he survived without a scratch. Hardly had the last shot been fired when he was riding hell bent to the nearest town and an intact telegraph wire. The manuscript that he carried was long and beautifully done. Every fact was accurate; every word gospel truth. It was, thought Garfield, about the best war story ever written for a newspaper, simply because its author had been on hand during the fighting, had written down detailed descriptions of every charge and sally and retreat as it actually happened. Moreover, it was a scoop!

Back in Boston old man Upton read over the long and carefully worded wire that had come to him, charges collect, from his correspondent in Majorca, Mexico, and sadly shook his head.

"Hal," he called, addressing a copy boy. "Hal, what's on the wire service about the Mexican scrap?"

Hal wrinkled his nose to indicate that news from Mexico was nil. "Nothin', Boss. Same old stuff. And if you ask me, the can't be much of a war. What we oughter do is run some more of Nichols' stuff. That's what folks like to read. Good live news!"

But old man Upton only shook his head and picked up a copy of the wire he had just sent Garfield. It read: "Just received your last 'Fiction' story. And I mean last. You're fired. Suggest you sell your imaginary 'news' to a magazine."

Wood as Livestock Feed

In Many Foreign Lands

Judging from reports received over a number of months in the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, wood as a source of livestock feed is gradually passing from an experimental stage into that of practical utilization in some European countries.

It is interesting to note that in this development—the result of many years of research and experimental work—wood is the basic material not only for a new type of carbohydrate feed, but also for protein feed. The former is the so-called feed cellulose produced from wood; the latter is feed yeast obtained from wood sugar and nitrogenous materials by biological processes.

Feed cellulose as a pure carbohydrate fodder is being produced on a fairly extensive scale in Sweden, Norway and Finland. It is estimated that upward of 100,000 metric tons of feed cellulose will actually be fed in Norway during the current year and that the quantity produced and fed in Sweden will be even larger. In Finland the output of feed cellulose per day is estimated at 700 metric tons, which on an annual basis would be around 200,000 metric tons. Yet, in spite of this large output, the new feed is popular enough to have called forth a demand on the part of feeders that cannot be fully satisfied.

Dear Oscar:
I have not slept hardly a wink since reading about American forces being in Iceland and I wish you would not say like you did in your last letter that the boys sent there are lucky because it is so hot in American draft camps in summer. I would not like it if you were in Iceland of all places and how can you say Iceland is not so bad when all you know is what you have seen in the travelogues at the movie houses.

It is all very well to say that the climate is not so terrible and that it is not at all like the North Pole but when you are in the Arctic zone you are in the Arctic zone and your father says that Iceland is awful and is the place where Peary and Dr. Cook had all that trouble and where Admiral Byrd is always getting stuck in the ice floes.

Our groceryman who used to be a sailor says your father is wrong and has got his geography all mixed up. He says he was in Iceland and that he has seen it a lot colder in this country but if it is so good why did he only make short stops there?

I looked it up in a book at the free public library which was quite a job as every book on Iceland was either out or was being read in the reference room and I had to wait all day in line with a lot of America mothers who are as worried as I am about the place.

It is even farther away than I suspected. I never paid much attention to Iceland but I always had an idea it was just off the North American coast near Labrador. Why, Oscar, it is even farther away than Greenland which is so far away it is not on any map we ever had in our house.

It looks so close to the British Isles on the map that it almost seems like it got accidentally detached in a storm, and a yellow line with the words Arctic Circle printed in red letters goes right through the top of it in case anybody is in any doubt.

The atlas says it is a volcanic plateau covered by glaciers in the northern part and pastures and meadows in the south but it would be just your luck to get sent to the northern part and it must be terrible to be there where there are volcanoes and glaciers all mixed in together. You would never know what underwear to put on.

Your father and I hope you stay right where you are so please do not talk about wanting to go to Iceland any more. I am sending you the things you asked for and will write more soon.
With all my love,
Mother.

Dear ma--Just a line to let you know I dropped the idea of trying to get switched to an Iceland division on account it is too hot in this country just now. Do not worry. You are wrong about Iceland and so is pop. This time of year it has flowers and farm crops and even heat waves and before Americans have been there much it will have Miss America contests.

Even should I ever get sent there I have just read that its principal export is cod liver oil with you half been telling me was good for me all my life. The camp atlas says its best crop is potatoes with is alone enough to keep me from wanting to go there. I never seen so many potatoes since I got into the army and I have personally peeled all but two or three quarts of 'em. I wood want no part in saving any country which had more of them.

So do not worry. Tell pop he must of slept all through his geography classes at school. Lots of love, Oscar.

A draftee contributor who is stationed at one of the hottest camps in the country, heard of the occupation of Iceland with envy. "The lucky stiff!" he cried when told U. S. troops were there. "They must of had infloence!"

"Iceland?" he was heard to remark later. "That's the place that used to be on the gingerale hour."

To casual visitors to America who listen to the radio it must seem that America is a land which has but three major worries: Scalp irritation, intestinal irregularities and diet.
